

How China is Different from India?

Dr. Subhasis Bera
Asst. Professor
FORE School of Management
New Delhi 110 016
E-mail: sbera@fsm.ac.in

Abstract

While China's growth largely attributed to its manufacturing sector, foreign trade and FDI, a series of macroeconomic strategies have been adopted by the Chinese government to keep the balance between agricultural and manufacturing sectors. Although strict political regime is a synonymous with the Chinese governance, this paper pointed out that a transition to market economy is also visible and leading the country slowly to become a mix economy like India.

Key words: Macro Strategy, Infrastructure, Business Model, Domestic Market